French designer Mathieu Lehanneur \(http://www.mathieulehanneur.fr/works\) looked to the ocean for a collection of tables, benches, and stools, which continues his Liquid Marble series. The pieces \(http://www.carpentersworkshopgallery.com/ArtistWorks?40\) in the Ocean Memories \(http://www.mathieulehanneur.fr/project/ocean-memories\) collection look as if the rippling ocean water was frozen in time. They're digitally designed and crafted out of blocks of marble or polished bronze yet the three-dimensional waves look just like that of actual water.

The polished, uneven surfaces reflect light, much like water does, further intensifying its ocean-like resemblance. The organic tops easily transition to their geometric structures below while still feeling like the perfect contrast.
